QUEBEC, Que., Aug. 24—The momentous Quebec war conference between President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Churchill drew to a close today with the strongest possible emphasis on the fact that the meetings were called primarily to lay the plans for warfare against the Japanese aggressors in the Pacific.

During the last few days of the talks, newsmen have been given "crumbs" of information which have caused them to switch from speculation on forthcoming European operations to a virtual certainty that the prime reason for the conference was to discuss and reach decisions on the war in the East.

There have been five different announcements, all official, which have caused reporters from the Allied world to revise their thoughts on the reasons for the Quebec meeting. They are:

1. Announcement of the re-occupation of Kiska.
2. President Roosevelt's invitation to have Chinese foreign minister, T. V. Soong, journey to the conferences, highlighting the Chinese position in the war talks in the Citadel.
3. Attendance of Navy Secretary Frank Knox, who has been concerned chiefly with prosecuting the war against Japan — primarily a naval operation.

ROYAL DECREE
CLAMPS LID ON
ITALIAN PRESS

NEW YORK, Aug. 24 — Rigid government control of Italian newspapers reminiscent of the Mussolini regime was announced today in a Rome radio broadcast recorded by OWI.

A new royal decree nullified all transfer of newspaper ownership since the fall of Fascism and authorized confiscation of publications whose management is not approved by the minister of popular culture, according to the Italian broadcast.

These stringent measures were believed the result of growing wide-spread anti-government editorial expression.

Treasury's
Tax Plans
Kept HiddenSecrecy Even Extends To
Failure To Cooperate
With Solons

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—The treasury was declined to reveal its plans for raising $12,000,000,000 in additional taxes even to members of congress, it was disclosed today.

The extraordinary atmosphere of secrecy surrounding the treasury plans, it was believed, is due in part to the thumpings given its proposals by congress in the last two years.

Some congressional observers believe that the defeats suffered by the treasury in framing the huge war tax bills were due in part to bad timing of its proposals. Apparently, the treasury is seeking to avoid thrusting its plans to the forefront to be subjected to attacks until congress is ready to begin framing a bill.

This secrecy even extends to a failure to cooperate with the tax experts of the joint congressional tax committee, it was revealed by a prominent leader in tax legislation.

When Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and congressional tax leaders began to talk of a new tax bill, the congressional leaders urged cooperation by congressional and treasury tax experts during the summer.

Sen. Walter F. George (D) Ga., chairman of the senate finance committee, and Chairman Robert Doughton (D) N. C., of the house ways and means committee, have repeatedly expressed the hope that the experts could agree on major principles of a new tax bill so as to avoid further conflict with the treasury.

Despite this, according to congressional informants, the experts have gone their separate ways in trying to find ways of raising the huge sum sought for war financing.

Colin F. Stam, chief of the joint congressional tax committee, has been working on proposals for an excessive profits tax on individuals. Treasury experts, however, have already agreed to oppose such a plan.

The only tentative proposals broached by the treasury to members of congress included alternate plans. One featured both a spending tax and a sales tax, but it is understood that the administration would not permit presentation of the sales tax to congress.

The tentative treasury plans also included stiff boosts in tax rates on corporations and individuals, with scores of so-called luxury sales taxes, which included a sharp increase in the cigarette tax.

Strong sentiment also has been indicated in congress for a compulsory savings program, but Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has opposed this on the ground that it would interfere with his voluntary bond selling campaign.

Information reaching congressional sources today indicated that the treasury tax plan will not be given to the house ways and means committee until late in September. Doubt is expressed by some members of congress that a new tax bill can be finally passed before Jan. 1.

BUDAPEST SAYS
ROME OPEN CITY

LONDON, Aug. 24—A Budapest radio broadcast said the United States and Great Britain have agreed "in principle" to declaration of Rome as an open city.

The broadcast quoted a Rome correspondent as saying American and British replies to Italian Marshal Pietro Badoglio's plea to spare Rome from further bombings, received at the Vatican, demanded a Vatican guarantee that military objectives would be removed from the Capital and that a neutral commission be appointed to control demilitarization of the city.

NOTHING WRONG WITH THE WORLD!

TRoubles OF THE WORLD certainly do not weigh heavily upon the tiny shoulders of 11-month-old Duke Duane Allen. But why should they? Local Dads Not Likely To Get Service Call
Earlier Than November

Announcement in Washington Tuesday that 446,000 fathers will be called for military service by December 31 to meet anticipated manpower needs of 907,000 men indicates that the Pickaway county Selective Service board will join with all other boards throughout the nation in reclassifying draft age dads.

The Pickaway county board has not taken any action yet to reclassify its draft age fathers. Indications are that unless the October call is bigger than predicted no pre-Pearl Harbor fathers will have to be taken from Pickaway county before November.

Some childless husbands will be available to help fill the October call in addition to 18 year olds and others whose classifications may be changed for one reason or another.

The board has completed preparation of its September list, the contingent to be a few men short of the August call.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national Selective Service director, explained in a letter to the 6,500 local draft boards that there are currently available only 1,427,000 eligible men to meet requirements for 1,873,000.

He said that fathers must be taken unless additional manpower can be found in other deferred classifications, such as 4-F's and agricultural workers.

Although new 18-year-olds and men reclassified from occupationally deferred groups will total 644,000, Hershey said, only 783,000 of the 1,566,000 men in class 1-A on July 1 are expected to pass the physical tests.

"It, therefore, appears that the only large deferred pool remaining from which men can be called is the group of fathers, numbering 6,559,000," he asserted.

Hershey said that a total of 2,822,000 deferments have been granted essential farm and industrial workers. Of these, he added, not more than 685,000 could probably pass all military tests.

DEEPENS RUSS MYSTERY

Secret Foreign Mission
Of Great Importance
Believed Possible

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—The unexplained absence from Washington of Undersecretary of State Summer Welles at a tense juncture in Anglo-American relations with Soviet Russia over higher war strategy today provided a mystery almost as deep as Russia's sudden diplomatic rebuff to Washington and London.

With President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull both in Quebec, Canada, engrossed in war strategy conferences with Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, Welles suddenly left the capital over the week end for an unannounced destination.

The unusual importance of the undersecretary's absence was further and particularly underlined by the fact that Soviet Russia Saturday night suddenly announced that its two top-ranking ambassadors and advocates of co-operation with the United States and London, had been withdrawn from Washington and London and replaced by young, comparatively inexperienced and virtually unknown officers.

Russian Rebuff

The Russian diplomatic switch, timed to come at the height of the Quebec conference, was widely interpreted as an official Russian expression of extreme dissatisfaction over the failure of the United States and Great Britain to open a major "second front" in western Europe.

The absence of Welles from Washington under these circumstances aroused two persistent reports in official Washington circles. These were:

1. That Welles had tendered his resignation as undersecretary of state to President Roosevelt, ostensibly to build his political fences for a campaign next year for the United States senate from Maryland against Sen. Millard F. Tydings.

2. That Welles had been sent on a foreign mission of high importance by President Roosevelt.

This latter report concerned itself with two destinations. One, and the obvious one in view of the Russian action, that he had taken a plane for Moscow even before breakup of the Quebec conference in order to reconcile the Anglo-American and Soviet points of view on the conduct of the war in Europe.

May Be In Rome

The second reported destination was that Welles had gone to the Mediterranean war theatre, where (Continued on Page Two)

JERSEY LABOR
MOVES OUT ON
48-HOUR WEEK

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 24—An exodus of New Jersey workers to jobs in New York today threatened Jersey war production as a result of a recent order making the 48-hour week mandatory in New Jersey.

Officially less than 43 percent of the state's workers went on the six-day work week yesterday, and reports of resignations or threatened resignations flooded the war manpower commission's offices.

Major Howard J. Lepper, acting director for the Newark WMC, warned that war workers must have releases to seek new jobs and that employees and employers alike would be subject to $1,000 fine for violating job releases.

New York at present is on a 40-hour week schedule.

WMC Policy Committee
Scans Charge Too Many Men Holding Farm Jobs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—The War Manpower Commission's management-labor policy committee meets today to consider charges that too many men are being employed in agriculture.

This was regarded as an indication that industry and the Army and Navy are attempting to "crack down" on the government's favorable draft deferment policies for farmers.

Reliable sources in the department of agriculture, as well as in independent farm organizations, pointed out that despite the government's call for 750,000 crop corps volunteers to handle the Fall harvest, pressure is being applied against the present agriculture deferment policy.

In the opinion of most farm bloc leaders and congressmen from the Midwestern farm belt, the farm labor situation "is still tight" and many farmers are worried about help for harvesting this year's crop and planting next year's.

It was estimated that thousands of industrial workers, many of them former farmers, have moved back to farm jobs since the recent deferment order for farm workers went into effect.

This "back to the farm" movement has put a serious crimp in the number of war workers in industry, it was asserted, and has drawn many essential war workers from munitions and aircraft plants into agricultural jobs.

If the WMC decides to "move in" on agriculture, however, it is expected such action will be met by strong opposition from the farm bloc which is, as things now stand, rather well satisfied with the rural manpower situation.

The farm has long been a good source of supply for men needed in the Army and Navy and in industry. Now that stringent deferment policies are in effect to keep the farmers on the farm, the armed forces and war plants are finding it increasingly difficult to get sufficient manpower.

Farm bloc opponents argue that under present regulations farmers are not allowed to go from farms to industrial jobs unless such a move is okayed by the U. S. Employment Service.

But, they point out, a highly-skilled worker in an airplane plant, for example, can pick up and move out to a farm (where he will probably be assured of draft deferment) whenever he wishes.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 24 — The American bombing of the Ploesti oil field forced Romania to suspend all oil exports, according to a statement today by Nulescu Buzesti, chief of the Romanian foreign department's commercial bureau.

Buzesti, who arrived in Stockholm en route from Finland, where he signed a new trade agreement, said Romania would get out of the war if it received an honorable offer from the Allies.

DETROIT YOUTHS
JOKINGLY FACE
DEATH BY NOOSE

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 24—Two Detroit youths were hanged early this morning for the murder of Joseph Borg, Windsor restaurant operator.

The men were Stefan Odrogowski, 24, and Bruno Kiselewski, 21. Kiselewski was the first to die. He stepped unassisted to the trap at 12:27 a. m. and was pronounced dead at 12:48.

Odrogowski, who was dressed in a tuxedo, black bow tie, and patent leather shoes, followed at 1:02 a. m. and was dead exactly 15 minutes later.

Both men refused shots of morphine with mocking laughter. "Take it easy," said Odrogowski to the hangman, "I'm not accustomed to this."

The wise-crack brought a slightly-audible snicker from the 18 perspiring witnesses who had crowded into a small corridor in the Essex county jail for the double execution.

Before going to the gallows, Odrogowski sang the cowboy song, "I'm Going Back To My Red River Valley."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the FBI, today announced the smashing of the first spy ring since Pearl Harbor, and the arrest of three German agents in Detroit, two of them women.

Those taken into custody on charges of violating the wartime espionage statute were:

Mrs. Theresa Behrens, 44, Detroit, German-Hungarian secretary of the international center, Young Women's Christian Association.

Dr. Fred William Thomas, 44, Detroit, a surgeon and physician. Grace Buchanan - Dineen, 34, Detroit.

Hoover also announced that two German aliens living in Detroit had also been arrested as part of the ring, but in conformity with wartime practices, he did not disclose their names.

Grace Buchanan-Dineen, Hoover disclosed, was trained in German espionage in Hungary prior to American entrance in the war and entered this country by Clipper plane October 27, 1941.

Spotted by the FBI only two months later, Miss Buchanan-Dineen was seized by the FBI and agreed to act as a counter espionage agent.

The assault was delivered in clear weather. The air ministry communique said the Berlin attack was highly concentrated and that a number of enemy planes (Continued on Page Two)

ONE MAN'S
OPINION

By Walter Kierman

Well, we are in for another winter of flat heat.

The OPA has had twelve months in which to consider the folly of measuring a house in square feet, instead of cubic feet, for fuel oil allotments.

And it has come to a brilliant decision.

Houses will still be measured in square feet.

My house has a one-story living room, my neighbor, three doors away, has a studio or two-story living room. The floor space in both is exactly alike.

He gets the same amount of fuel oil to heat his two-story living room that I get to heat my one-story room. . . and I don't get enough.

He can go down to the local rationing board, tell his story all over again, and maybe get some extra oil. But why should he have to? Why haven't last year's blunders been corrected by now?

Thought for the day: If it concerns oil, it's confused.

Treasury's Tax Plans Kept Hidden

Ogradowski, who was dressed in a tuxedo, black bow tie, and patent leather shoes, followed at 1:02 a. m. and was dead exactly 15 minutes later.

Both men refused shots of morphine with mocking laughter. "Take it easy," said Ogradowski to the hangman, "I'm not accustomed to this."

The wise-crack brought a slightly-audible snicker from the 18 presiding witnesses who had crowded into a small corridor in the Essex county jail for the double execution.

Before going to the gallows, Ogradowski sang the cowboy song, "I'm Going Back To My Red River Valley."

F. B. I. SMASHES HUN SPY RING

One Of German-Trained Trio Aids Federals After Original Arrest

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the FBI, today announced the smashing of the first spy ring since Pearl Harbor, and the arrest of three German agents in Detroit, two of them women.

Those taken into custody on charges of violating the wartime espionage statute were:

Mrs. Theresa Behrens, 44, Detroit, German-Hungarian secretary of the international center, Young Women's Christian Association.

Dr. Fred William Thomas, 44, Detroit, a surgeon and physician. Grace Buchanan - Dineen, 34, Detroit.

Hoover also announced that two German aliens living in Detroit had also been arrested as part of the ring, but in conformity with wartime practices, he did not disclose their names.

Grace Buchanan-Dineen, Hoover disclosed, was trained in German espionage in Hungary prior to American entrance in the war and entered this country by Clipper plane October 27, 1941.

Spotted by the FBI only two months later, Miss Buchanan-Dineen was seized by the FBI and agreed to act as a counter espionage agent.

"Subsequently," the announcement said, "Miss Buchanan-Dineen (Continued on Page Two)"

LONDON, Aug. 24 — German military forces today completely occupied the Danish capital of Copenhagen, Reuters reported from Stockholm.

A force of at least 50,000 German troops was said to have taken over control of the city as a result of recent strikes, acts of sabotage and clashes between Germans and Danish patriots.

Nazi tanks were said to be patrolling the streets to maintain order after a number of fatalities occurred.

Berlin was pounded early today by swarms of massive British bombers which dropped an estimated 1800 tons of explosives and incendiaries in the war's biggest raid on the German capital in what London termed "the beginning of the battle of Berlin."

The size of the attack force was indicated by a British air ministry acknowledgment that 58 bombers and one fighter plane failed to return from the assault on Berlin and simultaneous intruder attacks on German airfields and objectives in occupied Europe.

The assault was delivered in clear weather. The air ministry communique said the Berlin attack was highly concentrated and that a number of enemy planes (Continued on Page Two)

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Kiernan

Well, we are in for another Winter of flat heat.

The OPA has had twelve months in which to consider the folly of measuring a house in square feet, instead of cubic feet, for fuel oil allotments.

And it has come to a brilliant decision.

Houses will still be measured in square feet.

My house has a one-story living room, my neighbor, three doors away, has a studio or two-story living room. The floor space in both is exactly alike.

He gets the same amount of fuel oil to heat his two-story living room that I get to heat my one-story room. . . and I don't get enough.

He can go down to the local rationing board, tell his story all over again, and maybe get some extra oil. But why should he have to? Why haven't last year's blunders been corrected by now?

Thought for the day: If it concerns oil, it's confused.

Blows Believed Prepared For Pacific Area

Shift In Strategy May Be Indication To Reds Of Displeasure

And, in the eyes of newsmen here, there could have been only two purposes in "steering" the news stories from the European to the Asiatic theatre of the world wide conflict.

First, is the possibility that the leaders of the English speaking Allies wish to draw a smoke-screen across the actual purpose behind the conference, and at the same time, bring into full play psychological warfare by keeping the enemy guessing.

Russ Countered

Second, is that the accent was placed on the war in the Pacific in order to counter obvious Russian dissatisfaction with Britain and the United States for failing to undertake a "second front" in Europe.

Obviously, the high diplomatic officials of the two Allied nations have not been blind to the import behind various Russian maneuvers and announcements, such as its public urging for a "second front," the creation of "free German and Free Italian" committees in Moscow, and the timing of the announcement of the recall of United States Ambassador Maxim Litvinov to coincide with the meeting at Quebec.

Therefore, to observers at Quebec, the accent on the Pacific has served to inform Joseph Stalin that the two English speaking Allies can also play at the game of issuing veiled indications of displeasure.

And, there is the possibility that by accenting the Pacific, we have indirectly informed Russia that, unless she collaborates more closely with the United States and Great Britain in post war as well as war matters—she may, by her own actions, unnecessarily prolong the Russo-German war, just as she will prolong the time until peace can be restored by all the United Nations throughout the entire world.

een cooperated fully with the FBI in receiving information desired by the German espionage service when it became apparent to her that she could not carry out the instructions of her Nazi employers.

"She has operated under the surveillance of the FBI, and all information reported to her and forwarded to her Nazi espionage superiors abroad has cleared through the FBI, and Army and Navy intelligence services.

Hoover said that the activities of the group "centered about" Miss Buchanan-Dineen, who was described as an "attractive, well-educated descendant of French nobility" and a native of Canada.

"Dr. Thomas has long been known to the FBI in Detroit as an associate of Theodore Donay, who was recently convicted for treason in Detroit, Fritz Kuhn, Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, (Bund leaders) and Max Stephan, whose death sentence for treason was recently commuted to life."

Hoover said that Miss Buchanan-Dineen had been trained in Budapest, Hungary, by Sari De Hajek, a former well-known lecturer in this country on Hungarian folklore, and a Vassar graduate, and her husband Cuyula Rozinek, who was deported from this country in May, 1941.

It was Mrs. Behrens, one of those arrested today in Detroit, who posted $500 bond for Rozinek at the time of his deportation, Hoover said.

As the key figure in the case, Miss Buchanan-Dineen was sent to this country charged with directing an espionage ring for the location of munition and airplane factories, military camps and naval bases, the FBI said. She was also instructed to obtain all available information concerning helium, the gas used in dirigibles, and the composition and sailing dates of convoys, it was added.

"A representative of the German espionage service," Hoover said, "had agreed that she was to receive $500 a month, and prior to her departure from Lisbon, a German naval attaché gave her an advance of $2,500 with the promise that she would receive additional funds in Detroit."

"Sari De Hajek while tutoring Grace Buchanan-Dineen in making contacts in the United States, prepared a checked green-and-black notebook alphabetically indexed and setting forth the names, addresses, and, in most instances, telephone numbers of persons known by her in the United States."

"Sari pointed out that the names listed would give Buchanan-Dineen an entry into circles where she might obtain information of interest to the German espionage service and that in addition the influential persons listed could assist her in carrying out her pretext as an espionage agent. Beside each name in the notebook Sari De Hajek indicated how each was to be greeted by Miss Buchanan-Dineen, adding a few notes about them and their availability for assistance."

Double Blow

Preliminary reports indicated that the assault on Berlin was at least twice as heavy as any previously delivered against the Nazi capital. A Stockholm dispatch said neutral correspondents in the city were forbidden to transmit any information regarding the raid.

The entire force was composed of Lancasters, Stirlings and Halifaxes, making it probably the biggest four-engined-plane raid of the war.

Airmen who participated were unanimous in labeling it the best raid in the war, marked by excellent weather, second-rate opposition and brilliant bombing.

From 250 miles away the home-ward-bound RAF crews saw vast fires and the last wave reported seeing smoke belching upward to a height of 15,000 feet.

The crews said the attack was at least as effective as any one of those which laid Germany's second city, Hamburg, a complete waste. But while the opposition encountered at Hamburg was very strong, Berlin's defenses last night were not so formidable.

Weak Defenses

The Germans depended mainly on their night fighters, in co-operation with searchlights. The flak was described by all the airmen as unusually weak and aimless.

Some 5,000 veteran RAF crews from all over the British empire and some American volunteers participated in the kill for which they had waited so long. All of them praised the "pathfinders" who directed the bombing, which covered a four-square mile path in Berlin.

German raiders appeared over English coastal towns and East Anglia during the night. Five were shot down and little damage and no casualties were reported.

Amid the repeated reports of the massing of a huge Allied invasion fleet in the Mediterranean area, American warplanes continued to hammer at the Italian mainland without opposition from Axis airmen. Battered after four days of heavy punishment, the German air force in Italy withdrew yesterday, leaving the Italian skies wide open to Allied warplanes from North Africa.

Italy Blasted

An Allied communique today announced a heavy assault by Mitchell medium bombers, Warhawks and Invaders on Battipaglia, south of Naples. Railroad yards and warehouses were laid in ruins. Although there was no interception by Axis planes, heavy anti-aircraft fire from the ground was encountered. Other Warhawks simultaneously bombed barracks in Sardinia.

British and Canadian Wellington bombers struck the rail communications center of Bagnoli in central Italy Sunday night.

The whole German southern front in Russia appeared to be weakening today as a result of Soviet capture yesterday of Khar'kov, key to Nazi defenses all the way south to the sea of Azov. Front-line dispatches received in Moscow today said Russian forces 165 miles southeast of Khar'kov tore a big gap in the Nazi Miur river line southwest of Voroshilovgrad and severed the railroad between Taganrog and Stalino following advances ranging up to 22 miles.

Massive tank battles were in progress west of Khar'kov, on the route to Boltava, as German forces retreating from the Ukrainian steel city battled desperately to keep their westward escape route open.

In Moscow, the liberation of Khar'kov was celebrated with a 224-gun salute of 20 salvos.

In the Pacific war theatre, Allied capture of the Japanese base of Salamaua in New Guinea neared as American and Australian ground troops pushed across the Francisco river to the edge of Salamaua's airfield, while warplanes pounded Salamaua and the companion base of Finschhafen and Allied naval surface craft bombarded Finschhafen in a night attack.

BLOWS BELIEVED PREPARED FOR PACIFIC AREA

Shift In Strategy May Be Indication To Reds Of Displeasure

(Continued from Page One) Mr. Roosevelt would be for the purpose of discussing the war against Japan, and 5. The statement by Minister of Information Brendan Bracken, a member of the British war cabinet, that, at a meeting yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt, Churchill, Soong and Harry Hopkins, had "decided on important points of strategy in the Pacific," and that they were a "very, very important part of the conference."

It is not considered possible that the five points, all devoting into the picture of war against Japan, could have been left slip by the expert public relations men in charge of news of what may well be considered the most important of the six war meetings between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill.

And, in the eyes of newsmen here, there could have been only two purposes in "steering" the news stories from the European to the Asiatic theatre of the world wide conflict.

First, is the possibility that the leaders of the English speaking Allies wish to draw a smoke-screen across the actual purpose behind the conference, and, at the same time, bring into full play psychological warfare by keeping the enemy guessing.

Russ Countered

Second, is that the accent was placed on the war in the Pacific in order to counter obvious Russian dissatisfaction with British and the United States for failing to undertake a "second front" in Europe.

Obviously, the high diplomatic officials of the two Allied nations have not been blind to the important behind various Russian maneuvers and announcements, such as its public urging for a "second front," the creation of "free German and Free Italian" committees in Moscow, and the timing of the announcement of the recall of United States Ambassador Maxim Litvinov to coincide with the meeting at Quebec.

Therefore, to observers at Quebec, the accent on the Pacific has served to inform Joseph Stalin that the two English speaking Allies can also play at the game of issuing veiled indications of displeasure.

And, there is the possibility that by accenting the Pacific, we have indirectly informed Russia that, unless she collaborates more closely with the United States and Great Britain—in post war as well as war matters—she may, by her own actions, unnecessarily prolong the Russo-German war, just as she will prolong the time until peace can be restored by all the United Nations throughout the entire world.

TIME CONSCIOUS BURGLAR WALKS OFF WITH CLOCK

An eight-day clock which has graced the walls of the home of William E. Valentine, East Franklin street, is no longer there. Valentine told police Monday evening that someone had entered his home between 3 and 6 p. m. Monday and had taken the clock.

Apparently the thief's only wish was to take the time piece, because nothing else was bothered.

CRUSHING THE REICH

LET no tender-hearted soul be disturbed by the stern order given to crush the Reich from the air, city by city, target by target. The Reich can stop these crushing blows at any moment by the act of unconditional surrender.

Let no one bewail the fact that in this great air bombardment the Allies are lowering their standards to those of the Axis. The Allies did not ask for invasion or bombing or war itself. The Axis invaded innocent countries, bombed cities without any regard to saving harmless civilians. In making unprovoked war it asked for war. It is getting now only what it asked for, and by uttering two words it can halt invasion before it begins, it can keep every plane on the ground, it can cause every munition-making nation to beat its swords into plough-shares, its spears into pruning hooks, and glad enough they would be to do it. What the United Nations are now seeking to accomplish is that "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

But the Axis has never shown good judgment. So it will not save its own people. The Allies have no choice. The bombs will continue to fall. The invading forces, now ready and marking time, will march on to Berlin. The day of the great crossing, so eagerly awaited, draws near.

TIN HATS FOR SMOKERS

THERE are still people who do not smoke and are annoyed when other people do so at close quarters in the same room. To relieve this situation, one ingenious inventor has devised a tin hat for smokers, with a chimney. This will carry smoke up towards the ceiling, out of other persons' eyes and noses. It may be worn by both men and women, but the women's hats get a little extra decoration through the addition of tin birds.

These chapeaux will undoubtedly remind westerners of those diesel trucks with black smoke coming out of chimneys, which the unaccustomed tourist, seeing it from a distance, is apt to think indicates either that the truck has caught fire or is being warmed with a stove. Walter Raleigh's maid, who threw water over him when she saw him smoking, would surely find justification in these hats.

Smokers get so much pleasure out of the practice that they sometimes forget that not everyone else shares their feelings. The non-smoker has really a rather hard time of it. About the only place where he is absolutely safe is in church. While these tin hats are not likely to be widely adopted, they might, so far as they become known, make smokers a little more considerate.

NEWSPRINT PRICE BOOSTS

WASHINGTON—Most people don't know it, but while the Canadian newsprint trust has managed to hike the cost of newsprint again, one of the largest newsprint companies—which will benefit from that raise—has a man right inside the Office of Price Administration. The OPA had to okeh the price increase before it could be made.

The newsprint representative inside the OPA is Hugh Phillips, formerly with the International Paper Co., one of the leading members of the Canadian newsprint group.

Phillips says that he has severed all connection with International Paper and receives no remuneration from them. He acknowledged, however, that:

"I am frankly partial to the industry viewpoint, and of course, I have many old familiar friends throughout the industry."

He also points out that the industry had bad sledding after its founding in the twenties because of the depression, and was not able to wipe out early construction costs. He emphasizes that Scandinavian newsprint was very harmful to the Canadian industry, which has made no money in the past.

Part of Phillips' job is to advise on whether the OPA should permit an increase in newsprint.

Twice during the year, newsprint has gone up, $4 each time. Simultaneously, President Roosevelt has been declaring for a roll-back in prices.

Note: International Paper, while paying no dividends on common stock since 1930, pays its six top officials $412,250 annually, plus additional benefits of $112,500.

"THE JESSE JONES APARTMENT"

If you are ever desperately hard up for a place to stay in Washington and are flush with cash, just go to the Statler hotel and ask for the "Jesse Jones Apartment."

It will cost you $85 for one night, but some business moguls are paying it when they can't find any place else to lay their heads.

The apartment is a penthouse originally designed for Secretary of Commerce Jones, and when it comes to de luxe suites it is really something. It has a grass lawn all its own, high above the streets of Washington, where you can sit out and have a mint julep on a mid-summer evening. It also has a little promenade walk, and rooms decorated in exquisite taste.

It happened that when the Statler was originally planned, Jesse Jones said he would like to have a permanent apartment in the hotel, so they designed this suite especially for him.

Then a rule was adopted that there could be no permanent guests, all had to be transients. This left Secretary Jones out. As a result the apartment is frequently empty, except when some desperate and flush business baron comes to town. Otherwise it is occupied intermittently by Mrs. Statler or members of the Statler board of directors.

DIET AND HEALTH

What is Your Type Lateral or Linear?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

IF WE UNDERSTOOD human growth completely, we would understand many of the unsolved problems of nutrition. For instance, a boy from aged five to aged thirteen is generally eating

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

quite a hefty set of meals, but he hardly grows at all. Then all of a sudden he starts to grow like a house afire with no increase in the amount of food he takes in.

Certainly an increase in body size requires proportionate nutrition, so why doesn't he grow from five on when he is doing all that eating. Then at sixteen, or thereabouts, again without any manifest change in his food habits, he stops growing. And you could pile extra food into him until Doomsday but still he wouldn't grow any more. Some say it is his glands, but you can stuff him with glands and not the width of a thumbnail will he grow.

The Stocky Type

Different groups of people show certain tendencies to grow along lines of both height and weight. And these result in types. The stocky types tend to be short, the slender types tend to be tall. There are all sorts of gradations in between.

These types have come in for a great deal of study, by anthropologists and physicians, who conclude that certain types are suited for certain work and are subject to certain stresses in life.

For instance, the Japanese as a racial characteristic are stocky. In height the average Japanese is 159 centimeters, as against an Iowa farmer's average of 176. In weight the Japanese is 294.0 grams against the Iowan's 3400. The Japanese is carrying considerably more grams per centimeter than the American and this is all in muscle and bone. He can be predicted to have more endurance in marching and in staying on long watches. Will power, of course, being equal, and we should have learned by this time not to underestimate our enemy on that.

Linear and Lateral People

As applied to medical practice the doctrine of constitutional types has had many proponents. Their classifications of individual bodily types differ slightly, but the general principles are the same. There are in general the linear and the lateral kinds of people. And it must be evident to anyone who does the least bit of thinking on the subject that they are fated to have different troubles in life. There is the dyspeptic, and the apoplectic, and the consumptive and the enthusiastic and the phlegmatic and the nervous and the stable—all types just as much related to the kinds of bodies they inhabit as a cactus is related to the desert, or an elm to watershed country.

Not, of course, that this is all there is to the causation of disease. There is environment, home training in childhood, heredity, and the accidents of germs and occupation. But it teaches us to individualize in treating patients.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

B. M.:—What is myocardial disease, or possible coronary embolism?

Answer: "Myo" means muscle, and "cardial" means heart. So myocardial means heart muscle disease. Coronary embolism means a clot of blood in a small artery of the heart. When this occurs, the nourishment to the heart muscle supplied by that artery suffers and myocardial disease results.

R. L. A.:—Do infant wants on a person around thirty go away as they do on children?

Answer: Yes, but you can help by the time-honored treatment of getting a half-ounce bottle of formalin at the drug store and dabbing the wart with the wet cork every once in a while.

Leave My Heart Alone

ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER FORTY

BROWN BETSY had been right. Buffy was not anywhere to be found. The entire household, including Karen and her father, joined in the hunt for him. Not only could the little fellow not be found, but no one remembered seeing him for some time. It was terrible to think that such a thing as this could have happened just after the wonderful talk she had had with her dad about the letter he would write to Buffy, about Buffy and how happy he was that her son was getting along so well in his new home.

Of course it was a terrible thing to have happen at any time! It was so terrible that, even after an hour of thorough searching, Karen could not accept this. She could not control the fears that prevailed upon her now, either, the terrible thoughts that came unbidden—thoughts of drowning, of being run down by a car, of kidnapping, of being lost.

"I'm afraid we had better inform the police," Jim Bell said. His brusque manner could not hide the fears that he tried to control and keep from Karen.

"The police?" Then her dad thought, too, that something terrible had happened.

"Surely the boy will turn up," Mr. Paul protested. He had dropped in while the search had been going on. He had joined in and appeared as anxious as the others, but Paul showed plainly that he knew they were making more of this than necessary; besides, the police meant unpleasant notoriety, which should be avoided if possible. "He's probably run away or gone off on some mischief of his own. All boys do such things—I know I did."

"I hope you are right," the child's grandfather said, looking a little relieved. That must be it; Buffy was up to a small boy's prank, maybe he was even enjoying this commotion he had caused, although he wasn't a child given to mischief as a rule. Jim agreed that the police should be kept out of it as long as possible, but not too long, unless the boy turned up within the next hour.

"Buffy wouldn't do that," Karen knew her small nephew too well. Paul's version of the matter did not comfort her. She did not want the police, either, unless they could help. What they wanted did not matter, only Buffy, and the thought that something terrible might have happened to him.

"I have phoned all the hospitals," Jane said, coming back into the big library where they had gathered after the last fruitless search. "They have no report of any accident."

That was an enormous relief, but it still left those other possibilities. There was the ocean, its breakers higher than a little boy's head, as there was a strong east wind, its undertow treacherous and powerful. But Buffy had been cautioned over and over never to venture into the water unless someone was with him. Marty had been teaching him to swim, but he had given the boy lessons, as well on the dangers connected with it. That left the theory that Buffy might be lost or kidnapped, this last the most terrible of all.

"Buffy is an intelligent little fellow," Cousin Ellen said. "If he had wandered off and lost his way back, he will know enough to keep his head. In that case it will be the police who will contact us."

"I have a friend, Roy Atkins, on the paper," Paul suggested. "It might not be a bad idea to talk to him."

"Newspapers are as bad, if one does not seek notoriety, as the police," Karen's father reminded. Not that he would not endure all the notoriety there was if it would bring his grandson safely back again.

"Roy can be trusted," Paul assured him. "I thought he might have something to suggest. And, if the boy doesn't turn up by dark, Roy could arrange for a radio broadcast."

It was agreed that Paul's friend should be consulted. All of them knew it was a rather vain hope, that eventually the police might have to be brought in. It would be dark within an hour. The days were at their shortest. Karen dared not think that Buffy might not turn up before night. As long as there was daylight, that gave something to cling to, but to think of Buffy alone in the dark, frightened or hurt, was almost more than she could bear. She was glad to have the task of comforting and scolding Betsy, who by now had gone into a mild case of hysterics, moaning and wringing her hands. It did not help Buffy for them to lose their heads, she reminded herself, as well as the girl.

Paul's friend came over immediately, more than happy, as he expressed it, to be of service. He suggested they notify the Coast Guard, just in case the boy had gone down on the beach. The Coast Guard would use discretion and employ every possible effort. Mr. Atkins also suggested that the radio announcement be made during the dinner hour, as that was a time when most listeners would tune in, and he thought if the family did not want to call the local police, it would be an excellent idea to get in touch with a good private detective.

It all seemed like a nightmare that could not really be happening. Surely it was only that, a horrible dream from which they soon would be awakened. The fact remained, however, that Buffy had been gone now for several hours and that there was absolutely no trace or sign of him. He would not have stayed away this long had it been of his own volition; it was time for his supper in the nursery, the one meal the little boy always was anxious to have arrive. He would be hungry by now, as well as frightened. That was why Karen knew she would not be able to swallow so much as a mouthful when dinner was announced by Jan.

"You must make an effort to eat," her father said sternly. He had no desire for food himself, but it would do no good to refuse it. Jane had gone to tears and had to leave the table almost as soon as she had sat down. Cousin Ellen sat silently, with her thin lips pressed tight, her back straight. Paul and his newspaper friend, although invited to join them, had refused and were cloistered in the study composing the notices that might have to be released and contacting the private detective Atkins had recommended.

Karen obediently tried to eat a part of what was on her plate, more for her father's sake than her own. Her thoughts kept turning to Denise, thought that the child's mother was being spared this agony of apprehension, yet sorrowful to think that the trust she had placed in them, her son's guardians, should have suffered this hard blow.

Dinner was a nightmare, too, drawn out interminably, with its many courses, its stilted service and oppressive silence. Even Jan seemed slower, more dignified and withdrawn behind his mask, than usual. Karen wondered how he felt about the little boy's being gone, if indeed Jan would feel anything. He would know all about it, of course, although he would not let on. It was funny how curious Martin had been about the old servant. The questions he had asked. Karen since had asked her father the same ones and had learned that Jan was German, not Swiss, and probably had some relatives left in the old country; he no longer received any mail from there, however, probably had lost all contact, so that if Martin's interest had covered any suspicion it was unfounded.

But how could she be thinking about Jan, or even Marty, with Buffy missing, with darkness coming closer every moment. There was some sort of commotion now going on in the big center hallway. It was not just that the gong had been sounded and the heavy front door opened, but there were Paul's voice, raised above its usual even tenor, and Roy Atkins' joining his, and the old setter, Roxey, barking more loudly and insistently than usual.

Then another voice... sounding oddly familiar, yet it could not be, since Marty, although just then in her thoughts, was not that clear-voyant that he would have come over just now... and still another... a child's. It could be Buffy's, but more likely was imagined. Karen could not do anything except jump up from the table and hurry to find out for herself. She was conscious that the rest had followed her example, her father, Cousin Ellen, even old Jan.

All of them, as well as Paul and Atkins, confronted the man and boy standing just inside the front door, both looking a bit confused and guilty, yet both grinning happily—Marty and Buffy, for it was those two, none other.

Timely Talk Across a
Capitol Dinner Table

Hull Picked to Win in State Department Feud

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—It was a Washington dinner party at its best. Six free-speaking people around a candle-lit table. An exquisitely beautiful roast of beef (hostess had saved up her ration points for this big moment.) Talk and back talk. Off the record gossip. On the record opinion. The guests—an ambassador, an editor, a WFB member, an economist, and a simple citizen.

Here summarized is a taste of the conversation: Secretary of State Cordell Hull will triumph over Assistant Secretary Sumner Welles in that long-standing interdepartmental quarrel.

Secretary Hull, or Judge Hull, as his old-time friends call him, is a stout-hearted feudist from the hills of Tennessee. Down where the Judge comes from, folks "bide their time" and then they strike.

Mr. Hull has been biding his time against Mr. Welles for years now. In Claiborne county where Mr. Hull was raised they also believe "give the enemy enough rope and let him hang himself."

Secretary Hull, if you look back over his career, has followed Tennessee customs ever since he came to Washington. Remember how he "bided his time" with Assistant Secretary Raymond Moley, when Mr. Moley was acting like a Number One Boy at the London economic conference.

Who was it who left the state department when the conference was over? Not Mr. Hull!

Assistant Secretary Sumner Welles may move on to the post of roving ambassador. Some people say he will. Or he may be minister to Canada. Again, he may retire from the state department and go in for Maryland politics.

Secretary Welles has long had a wish to run for the United States senate from the "Free State," with his Oxon Hill home as a base.

What will be the United Nations' attitude toward Germany when peace-making time comes? What especially will be the attitude of the United States toward Germany? We are not good haters in this country. We are fickle, say some philosophers. We forget both likes and hatreds in too much of a hurry.

Already Germany is propagandizing in a subtle way for a pretty peace. It is the duty of everybody to be on guard.

Watch out for the slogan "The German people are not like Hitler." The German people are indeed like Hitler or they would not have permitted him to lead them. Woodrow Wilson, not long before the peace of Versailles, said he had been wrong when he thought the German people were not like the Kaiser. They were or they would have deposed the Kaiser.

Some mighty tough boys are coming home from this war. It isn't a gentlemen's fight. Only the ferocious will survive. In some battlefields, the soldiers, so outraged by the booby traps set by the enemy, have wanted to retaliate by shooting down those who cried "Surrender!" They were afraid "Surrender" might be a variation of the German and Japanese trick of setting small bombs in the pockets of dead and wounded arranged to explode in the face of rescuers.

What will men who have survived such horrors think about the new world and how to live in it? I met several flyers who had been through the Tunisian campaign. They were so tough it hurt to look at them.

The last war, so sociologists declare, marked the end of Puritanism in the United States. The men who came back after having "seen Paree" found the old home town a little flat.

The veterans of this war may decide the whole world is the American stage. Present military objectives scatter men from the north pole to the south pole, around the equator and back again. Sons of the same family may now be seeing service in Alaska, Guadalcanal, Australia and China. Will these fighters, returning, believe that the United States can no longer hope again to live apart from the other countries?

Or will they say "the good old U. S. A. is the place for me. Let's mind our own business from now on!"

CRUSHING THE REICH

LET no tender-hearted soul be disturbed
by the stern order given to crush the Reich from the air, city by city, target by target. The Reich can stop these crushing blows at any moment by the act of unconditional surrender.

Let no one bewail the fact that in this great air bombardment the Allies are lowering their standards to those of the Axis.
The Allies did not ask for invasion or bombing or war itself. The Axis invaded innocent countries, bombed cities without any regard to saving harmless civilians. In making unprovoked war it asked for war.
It is getting now only what it asked for,
and by uttering two words it can halt invasion before it begins, it can keep every plane on the ground, it can cause every munition-making nation to beat its swords
into plough-shares, its spears into pruning hooks, and glad enough they would be to do it. What the United Nations are now seeking to accomplish is that "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

But the Axis has never shown good judgment. So it will not save its own people. The Allies have no choice. The bombs will continue to fall. The invading forces, now ready and marking time, will march on to Berlin. The day of the great crossing, so eagerly awaited, draws near.

TIN HATS FOR SMOKERS

THERE are still people who do not smoke
and are annoyed when other people do so at close quarters in the same room. To relieve this situation, one ingenious inventor has devised a tin hat for smokers,
with a chimney. This will carry smoke up towards the ceiling, out of other persons'
eyes and noses. It may be worn by both men and women, but the women's hats
get a little extra decoration through the addition of tin birds.

These chapeaux will undoubtedly remind westerners of those diesel trucks with black smoke coming out of chimneys,
which the unaccustomed tourist, seeing it
from a distance, is apt to think indicates either that the truck has caught fire or is being warmed with a stove. Walter Raleigh's maid, who threw water over him
when she saw him smoking, would surely find justification in these hats.

Smokers get so much pleasure out of the practice that they sometimes forget that not everyone else shares their feelings. The non-smoker has really a rather hard time of it. About the only place where he is absolutely safe is in church. While these tin hats are not likely to be widely adopted, they might, so far as they become known, make smokers a little more considerate.

NEWSPRINT PRICE BOOSTS

WASHINGTON — Most people don't know it, but while the Canadian newsprint trust has managed to hike the cost of newsprint again, one of the largest newsprint companies—which will benefit from that raise—has a man right inside
the Office of Price Administration. The OPA had to okeh the price increase before it could be made.

The newsprint representative inside the OPA is Hugh Phillips, formerly with the International Paper Co., one of the leading members of the Canadian newsprint group.

Phillips says that he has severed all connection with International Paper and receives no remuneration from them. He acknowledged, however, that:

"I am frankly partial to the industry
viewpoint, and of course, I have many old familiar friends throughout the industry."

He also points out that the industry
had bad sledding after its founding in the twenties because of the depression, and was not able to wipe out early construction costs. He emphasizes that Scandinavian newsprint was very harmful to the Canadian industry, which has made no money
in the past.

Part of Phillips' job is to advise on whether the OPA should permit an increase in newsprint.

Twice during the year, newsprint has gone up, $4 each time. Simultaneously, President Roosevelt has been declaring for a roll-back in prices.

Note: International Paper, while paying no dividends on common stock since 1930, pays its six top officials $412,250
annually, plus additional benefits of $112-500.

"THE JESSE JONES APARTMENT"

If you are ever desperately hard up for a place to stay in Washington and are flush with cash, just go to the Statler hotel
and ask for the "Jesse Jones Apartment".

It will cost you $85 for one night, but some business moguls are paying it when they can't find any place else to lay their heads.

The apartment is a penthouse originally designed for Secretary of Commerce
Jones, and when it comes to de luxe suites
it is really something. It has a grass lawn
all its own, high above the streets of Washington, where you can sit out and have a mint julep on a mid-summer evening. It also has a little promenade walk, and rooms decorated in exquisite taste.

It happened that when the Statler was originally planned, Jesse Jones said he would like to have a permanent apartment
in the hotel, so they designed this suite especially for him.

Then a rule was adopted that there could be no permanent guests, all had to be transients. This left Secretary Jones out.
As a result the apartment is frequently empty, except when some desperate and flush business baron comes to town. Otherwise it is occupied intermittently by Mrs.
Statler or members of the Statler board of directors.

What is Your Type Lateral or Linear?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

IF WE UNDERSTOOD human growth completely, we would understand many of the unsolved problems of nutrition. For instance, a boy from aged five to aged thirteen is generally eating

Dr. Clendening will answer

quite a hefty set of meals, but he hardly grows at all. Then all of a sudden he starts to grow like a house afire with no increase in the amount of food he takes in.

Certainly an increase in body
size requires proportionate nutrition, so why doesn't he grow from five on when he is doing all that eating. Then at eighteen, or thereabouts, again without any manifest change in his food habits, he stops growing. And you could pile extra food into him until Doomsday but still he wouldn't grow any more. Some say it is his glands,
but you can stuff him with glands
and not the width of a thumbnail
will he grow.

The Stocky Type

Different groups of people show
certain tendencies to grow along lines of both height and weight.
And these result in types. The stocky types tend to be short, the slender types tend to be tall. There are all sorts of gradations in between.

The types have come in for a great deal of study, by anthropologists and physicians, who conclude that certain types are fitted
for certain work and are subject
to certain stresses in life.

For instance, the Japanese as a racial characteristic are stocky. In height the average Japanese is 159 centimeters, as against an American average of 176. In weight
the Japanese is 2940 grams against the American's 3400. The Japanese is carrying considerably
more grams per centimeter than the American and this is all in muscle and bone. He can be predicted to have more endurance in marching and in staying on long watches. Will power, of course, being equal, and we should have learned by this time not to under-rate our enemy on that.

Linear and Lateral People

As applied to medical practice
the doctrine of constitutional types has had many proponents.
Their classifications of individual bodies types differ slightly, but
the general principles are the same. There are in general the linear and the lateral kinds of people. And it must be evident to anyone who does the least bit of thinking on the subject that they are fated to have different troubles in life. There is the dyspeptic, and the apoplectic, and the consumptive and the enthusiastic and the phlegmatic and the nervous and
the stable—all types just as much related to the kinds of bodies they inhabit as a cactus is related to the desert, or an elm to watershed
country.

Not, of course, that this is all
there is to the causation of disease.
There is environment, home training in childhood, heredity, and the accidents of germs and occupation.
But it teaches us to individualize
in treating patients.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

B. M.—What is myocardial disease, or possible coronary embolism?

Answer: "Myo" means muscle,
and "cardial" means heart. So myocardial means heart muscle disease. Coronary embolism means a clot of blood in a small artery of the heart. When this occurs, the nourishment to the heart muscle
supplied by that artery suffers
and myocardial disease results.

R. L. A.—Do infant wants on a person about thirty go away as they do on children?

Answer: Yes, but you can help
by the time-honored treatment of getting a half-ounce bottle of formalin at the drug store and dabbing the wart with the wet
cork every once in a while.

Leave My Heart Alone

BY ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER FORTY

BROWN BETSY had been right.
Buffy was not anywhere to be found. The entire household, including Karen and her father, joined in the hunt for him. Not only could the little fellow not be found, but no one remembered seeing him for some time. It was terrible to think that such a thing as this could have happened just after the wonderful
talk she had had with her dad
about the letter he would write to nurse, about Buffy and how happy nurse was that her son was getting along so well in his new home.

Of course it was a terrible thing
to happen at any time! It was terrible that, even after an hour
of thorough searching, Karen could not accept this. She could not con-rol the fears that prevailed upon her now, either, the terrible thoughts that came unbidden—
thoughts of drowning, of being run down by a car, of kidnapping, of being lost.

"I'm afraid we had better inform the police," Jim Bell said. His brusque manner could not hide the fears that he tried to control and keep from Karen.

"The police?" Then her dad
thought, too, that something terrible had happened.

"Surely the boy will turn up,
sir," Paul protested. He had dropped in while the search had been going on. He had joined in and appeared as anxious as the others.
But Paul showed plainly that he knew they were making more of this than necessary; besides, the police
could be avoided if possible. "He's probably run away or gone off on some mischief of his own. All boys
do such things—I know I did."

"I hope you are right," the child's grandfather said, looking at
him. "That must be it, Buffy
as up to a small boy's prank.
Maybe he was even enjoying this emotion he had caused, although
it wasn't a child given to mischief
as a rule. Jim agreed that the police should be kept out of it as long as possible, but not too long, not unless the boy turned up within the next hour."

"Buffy wouldn't do that." Karen knew her small nephew too well.
Paul's version of the matter did not comfort her. She did not want the police, either, unless they could help. What they wanted did not matter, only Buffy, and the thought that something terrible might have happened to him.

"I have phoned all the hospitals,"
Jane said, coming back into the big library where they had gathered
after the last fruitless search.
"They have no report of any accident."

That was an enormous relief, but
it still left those other possibilities.
There was the ocean, its breakers higher than a little boy's head, as there was a strong east wind, its undertow treacherous and powerful.
But Buffy had been cautioned over and over never to venture into the water unless someone was with him. Marty had been teaching him
"You must make an effort to

to swim, but he had given the boy
lessons, as well on the dangers connected with it. That left the theory that Buffy might be lost or kidnaped, this last the most terrible of all.

"Buffy is an intelligent little fellow," Cousin Ellen said. "If he has wandered off and lost his way back,
he will know enough to keep his head. In that case it will be the police who will contact us."

"I have a friend, Roy Atkins, on the paper," Paul suggested. "It might not be a bad idea to talk to him."

"Newspapers are as bad, if one does not seek notoriety, as the police," Karen's father reminded. Not that he would not endure all the notoriety there was if it would bring his grandson safely back again.

"Roy can be trusted," Paul assured him. "I thought he might have something to suggest. And, if the boy doesn't turn up by dark,
Roy could arrange for a radio broadcast."

It was agreed that Paul's friend
should be consulted. All of them
knew it was a rather vain hope,
that eventually the police might have to be brought in.
It would be dark within an hour.
The days were at their shortest.
Karen dared not think that Buffy might not turn up before night. As long as there was daylight, that gave something to cling to, but to think of Buffy alone in the dark, frightened or hurt, was almost more than she could bear. She was glad to have the task of comforting and scolding Betsy, who by now
had gone into a mild case of hysterics, moaning and wringing her hands. It did not help Buffy for them to lose their heads, she reminded herself, as well as the girl.

Paul's friend came over as immediately, more than happy, as he expressed it, to be of service. He suggested they notify the Coast Guard,
just in case the boy had gone down
on the beach. The Coast Guard would use discretion and employ every possible effort. Mr. Atkins also suggested that the radio announcement be made during the dinner hour, as that was a time
when most listeners would tune in,
and he thought if the family did not want to call the local police, it would be an excellent idea to get in touch with a good private detective.

It all seemed like a nightmare
that could not really be happening.
Surely it was only that, a horrible dream from which they soon would be awakened. The fact remained,
however, that Buffy had been gone
now for several hours and that there was absolutely no trace or sign of him. He would not have stayed away this long had it been
of his own volition; it was time for his supper in the nursery, the one meal the little boy always was anxious to have arrive. He would be hungry by now, as well as frightened. That was why Karen knew she would not be able to swallow so much as a mouthful
when dinner was announced by Jan.

"You must make an effort to eat," her father said sternly. He had no desire for food himself, but it would do no good to refuse it.

Jane had gone to tears and had to leave the table almost as soon as she had sat down. Cousin Ellen sat silently, with her thin lips
pressed tight, her back straight.
Paul and his newspaper friend, although invited to join them, had refused and were closeted in the study composing the notices that might have to be released and contacting the private detective Atkins
had recommended.

Karen obediently tried to eat a part of what was on her plate,
more for her father's sake than her own. Her thoughts kept turning to Denise, thankful that the child's mother was being spared this agony of apprehension, yet sorrowful to think that the trust she had placed in them, her son's guardians,
should have suffered this hard blow.

Dinner was a nightmare, too,
drawn out interminably, with its many courses, its stilted service
and oppressive silence. Even Jan seemed slower, more dignified and withdrawn behind his mask than usual. Karen wondered how he felt about the little boy's being gone, if indeed Jan would feel anything. He would know all about it, of course,
although he would not let on. It was funny how curious Martin had been about the old servant. The questions he had asked. Karen since had asked her father the same ones and had learned that Jan
was German, not Swiss, and probably had some relatives left in the old country; he no longer received
any mail from there, however,
probably had lost all contact, so
that if Martin's interest had covered any suspicion it was unfounded.

But how could she be thinking about Jan, or even Marty, with Buffy missing, with darkness coming closer every moment.

There was some sort of commotion now going on in the big center hallway. It was not just that the gong had been sounded and the heavy front door opened, but there was Paul's voice, raised above its usual even tenor, and Roy Atkins'
joining his, and the old setter, Roxey, barking more loudly and insistently than usual.

Then another voice . . . sounding
oddly familiar, yet it could not be,
since Marty, although just then in the house, was not that clear-
voiced that he would have come over just now . . . and still another . . . a child's. It could be Buffy's, but more likely was imagined. Karen could not do anything except jump up from the table and hurry to find out for herself. She was conscious that the rest had followed her example, her father,
Cousin Ellen, even old Jan.

All of them, as well as Paul and Atkins, confronted the man and boy standing just inside the front door, both looking a bit confused
and guilty, yet both grinning happily—Marty and Buffy, for it was those two, none other.

THE variations on sheer black for midsummer (and thereafter until old age overtakes a model) are myriad. Not all, however, are as cool and chic to look at as this dress which uses self ruffling to give a wide-shouldered emphasis above a slim skirt with vertical V of ruffling to enhance its narrowness.

Simple as can be, this treatment not only makes the wartime silhouette vastly becoming, but also offers dramatic background for the costume jewelry, the provocative hats, which women invariably adore and use artfully to stretch a curtailed basic wardrobe.

BOLD CAPTAIN VICTORIOUS IN CHICAGO RACE

CHICAGO, Aug. 24 — John Marsh's Occupation, which had been one of the better's top choices for the $50,000 American Derby next Saturday, was in slightly less favor today following his defeat in the $5,000 Try Too purse yesterday at Washington Park.

Occupation, giving away 13 pounds to his victorious rival, was beaten by a nose by Bold Captain, which had been brought on from Detroit for the tune-up race, Sickles Choice, three lengths back, took the show award from Eddie Anderson's Burnt Cork by three quarters of a length.

All Hoss completed the field of five. All, except Sickles Choice, are eligible for the derby which will be at a mile and a quarter.

Bold Captain, carrying 109 pounds, ran the mile in 1:37 1/5 and paid $11.80 to win.

War correspondents in Britain declare that U. S. airmen who fly these missions are the greatest heroes of the war. They have to face more fighting fury, and face it with more skill, than any other men in this war — whether fighting on land, sea, or in the air.

The mental strain is so great that when men get themselves keyed for a raid, and then the raid is called off, they react by dropping into a mood of irritation and despair.

NOTE: Bombing raids over Germany recall the comment of Raymond H. Geist, U. S. Consul General in Berlin, when he returned to the U. S. two years ago: "Victory in this war will go to the side which gets out of the cellar first."

INDECISIVE BROWN

Prentiss Brown is having a tough time making up his mind whether to resign as OPA Administrator. Several times he has been just on the verge, then backed away.

Inside fact is that when Prentiss gets wind that some people around the White House would like to have him quit, then his back stiffens and he is smitten with an acute case of hold-on-to-office.

Judge Jimmy Byrnes of South Carolina and Judge Fred Vinson of Kentucky don't agree as to whether Brown should stay. Byrnes thinks his forced exit would be a blow to a loyal Democrat and would be resented by Democrats in Capitol Hill. Vinson thinks Prentiss has too hard a time making up his mind not only about his own tenure of office, but about price control, and is too vacillating for the public good.

PARATROOP MIRACLE

There was one thrilling bit of untold history regarding the Allied landing in Sicily which now can be revealed. A division of U. S. parachute troops actually stopped about two Nazi divisions which were dashing to the seacoast to await Allied landing barges.

This occurred the night before the landing barges arrived. Had the paratroopers not succeeded in holding up the Nazis, U. S. troops might have landed literally in blood.

What happened was that the paratroopers, coming down mysteriously at night, not far from the Nazi divisions, fooled the enemy into thinking he was outnumbered. Actually, a paratroop division is far inferior in numbers to a division of ground troops. But the Nazis could not tell in the dark how many Americans there were, got the impression that the sky was packed with paratroopers.

ropes—say the first three are child's play compared with the current flak-and-fighter opposition of Germans.

The first flight a year ago was made without the loss of a single U. S. plane. The Germans were caught off guard by the daylight raid. But such things don't happen any more. It is no secret that U. S. losses on each raid over the continent are high enough to hurt badly, though not high enough to stop the operations.

War correspondents in Britain declare that U. S. airmen who fly these missions are the greatest heroes of the war. They have to face more fighting fury, and face it with more skill, than any other men in this war — whether fighting on land, sea, or in the air.

NAVY SEABEE HERO

A dramatic salute to the Seabees—the navy's colorful Construction Battalions, whose mottoes are "Can Do" and "We Fight For What We Build"—will be broadcast on the Cavalcade of America program over a nationwide NBC network Monday, August 30. Called "Dear Funny Face," the play was inspired by the heroism of a real-life Seabee. Starring in the radio drama will be Alfred Drake, currently featured in the Broadway musical hit, "Oklahoma," and Wendy Barrie, English-born screen actress. Drake portrays Larry Bleeker, a young mechanic.

RADIO NEWS BRIEFS

One conductor pays tribute to another bandleader when Dr. Frank Black and his orchestra present a medley of tunes by Isham Jones as a highlight of their concert program over NBC Friday at 8 p. m. Tunes are "Indiana Moon," "Swinging Down the Lane," "Spain," "On the Alamo," "I'll See You in My Dreams" and "Wooden Soldier and the China Doll."

Michael O'Day, heard as "The Parker Family's" Richard, has turned down several other radio assignments. He's limiting his radio schedule, to allow him more time to assist in harvesting farm crops in his native New Jersey.

With a record-breaking eight-week run at New York's Capitol theatre behind them, Phil Spitalny and his "Hour of Charm" all-girl orchestra are confining current activities to the Sunday NBC broadcast, as more or less a "vacation" before starting on a crowded Fall schedule.

Arnold Eidus, 18-year-old concertmaster of Raymond Paige's "Salute to Youth" orchestra, turns up in technicolor on the screen of your neighborhood movie house, in "Best Foot Forward." A member of Harry James' orchestra before he joined Paige, Eidus appears in the picture's dance sequence. He's the violinist in the middle, in the front row.

"Lum" (Chet Lauck) and "Abner" (Norris Goff), who have just completed their film "So This Is Washington," are set to go into production on their next movie about the middle of September.

Georgia Carroll, lovely song-

stress of Kay Kyser's "College of Musical Knowledge," has been selected by the boys at Kearny Mesa marine training center as their "Glamarine."

Frankie Carle and Horace Heidt, partners of "Treasure Chest" on NBC Tuesday nights, are also partners away from music. They share a truck farm in Van Nuys, California. Also in on the proposition is Fred Lowery, whistler on their program.

PATSY KELLY PLUMBER

Patsy Kelly, who becomes a lady plumber on the Jack Carson show over CBS Wednesday, decided to get a little background as a real pipe worker for this new kind of role. So she telephoned her house plumber and became his assistant, helping him on these days. Some time later, when Patsy showed up at the CBS studios, she strutted up to Jack Carson and boasting showed him her letter of reference. It read: "To whom it may concern: Patsy Kelly worked for us one day, and we're satisfied!"

"STAGE DOOR CANTEN"

Because another engagement, tentative at the time she agreed to appear on the "Stage Door Canteen" air show, has become definite, Claudia Morgan, stage and radio actress, will not be heard on the broadcast of Thursday, August 26, at 9:30 p. m., over station WBNS. Instead she will appear on the program at a later date. Roland Young of the movies, Bea

Wain of the "Hit Parade" and Robert Weede of the Metropolitan Opera join with Major General Edmund B. Gregory, Quartermaster General of the United States Army, in a salute to the Quartermaster Corps, which is observing its 165th anniversary. Bert Lytell is the series' officer-of-the-day, Raymond Paige conducts the orchestra.

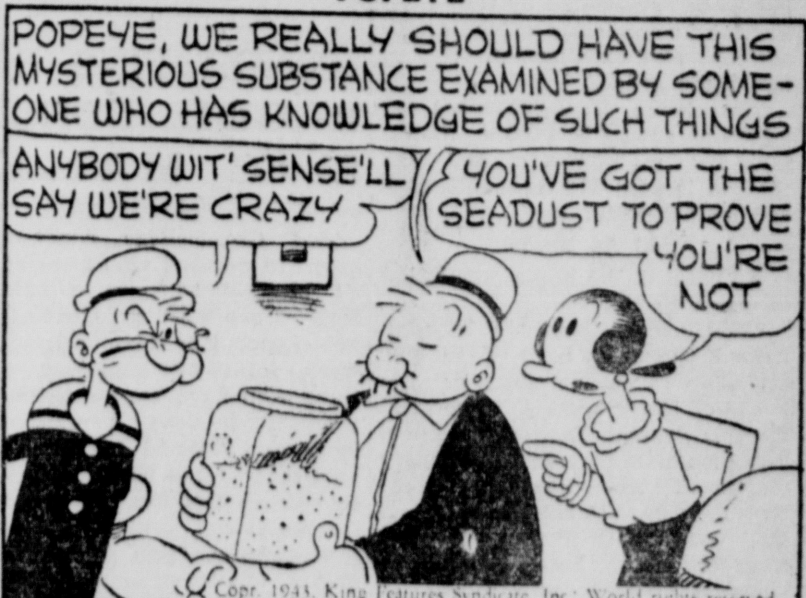

The Italians cry "Peace, peace!" and there is no peace.

NAVY SEABEE HERO

A dramatic salute to the Seabees—the navy's colorful Construction Battalions, whose mottoes are "Can Do" and "We Fight For What We Build"—will be broadcast on the Cavalcade of America program over a nationwide NBC network Monday, August 30. Called "Dear Funny Face," the play was inspired by the heroism of a real-life Seabee. Starring in the radio drama will be Alfred Drake, currently featured in the Broadway musical hit, "Oklahoma," and Wendy Barrie, English-born screen actress. Drake portrays Larry Bleeker, a young mechanic.

RADIO NEWS BRIEFS

One conductor pays tribute to another bandleader when Dr. Frank Black and his orchestra present a medley of tunes by Isham Jones as a highlight of their concert program over NBC Friday at 8 p. m. Tunes are "Indiana Moon," "Swinging Down the Lane," "Spain," "On the Alamo," "I'll See You in My Dreams" and "Wooden Soldier and the China Doll."

Michael O'Day, heard as "The Parker Family's" Richard, has turned down several other radio assignments. He's limiting his radio schedule, to allow him more time to assist in harvesting farm crops in his native New Jersey.

With a record-breaking eight-week run at New York's Capitol theatre behind them, Phil Spitalny and his "Hour of Charm" all-girl orchestra are confining current activities to the Sunday NBC broadcast, as more or less a "vacation" before starting on a crowded Fall schedule.

Arnold Eidus, 18-year-old concertmaster of Raymond Paige's "Salute to Youth" orchestra, turns up in technicolor on the screen of

"Lum" (Chet Lauck) and "Abner" (Norris Goff), who have just completed their film, "So This Is Washington," are set to go into production on their next movie about the middle of September.

Georgia Carroll, lovely song-

Frankie Carle and Horace Heidt, partners of "Treasure Chest" on NBC Tuesday nights, are also partners away from music. They share a truck farm in Van Nuys, California. Also in on the proposition is Fred Lowery, whistler on their program.

PATSY KELLY PLUMBER

Patsy Kelly, who becomes a lady plumber on the Jack Carson show over CBS Wednesday, decided to get a little background as a real pipe worker for this new kind of role. So she telephoned her house plumber and became his assistant. Some time later, when Patsy showed up at the CBS studios, she strutted up to Jack Carson and boasting showed him her letter of reference. It read: "To whom it may concern: Patsy Kelly worked

for us one day, and we're satisfied!"

"STAGE DOOR CANTEN"

Because another engagement, tentative at the time she agreed to appear on the "Stage Door Canteen" air show, has become definite, Claudia Morgan, stage and radio actress, will not be heard on the broadcast of Thursday, August 26, at 9:30 p. m., over station WBNS. Instead she will appear on the program at a later date. Roland Young of the movies, Bea

Wain of the "Hit Parade" and Robert Weede of the Metropolitan Opera join with Major General Edmund B. Gregory, Quartermaster General of the United States Army, in a salute to the Quartermaster Corps, which is observing its 168th anniversary. Bert Lytell is the series' officer-of-the-day, Raymond Paige conducts the orchestra.

TAX BLANKS ON WAY FOR FILING INCOME REPORT

Circleville and Pickaway county residents will start Tuesday to receive tax forms on which to estimate income for the calendar year 1943, Harry F. Bussey, collector of internal revenue, putting 300,000 tax forms in the mail addressed to taxpayers in 28 central Ohio counties.

The blanks are to be returned by September 15 with half of the amount due for the current year enclosed. They must be filed by single persons who are earning more than $2,700 annually and by married persons earning more than $3,500.

In the declaration the taxpayer will estimate the amount of tax due for the entire year after the March 15 and June 15 payments and any amounts withheld from wages are deducted.

Most persons earning less than $2,700 if single or $3,500 if married and who are paying their taxes through withholdings from their salaries by their employers will be exempted, Bussey said.

Shortage Of Teachers Not To Interfere With Educational Program

That Ohio's education standards will not be broken down by teacher shortages this year or in any other year was promised Tuesday by Harold J. Bowers of Ashville, state supervisor of teachers' certification. He declared that various school boards throughout the state are meeting the emergency through stop-gap measures.

Bowers, former school superintendent at Williamsport, said the state department is issuing temporary one-year certificates to persons whose qualifications do not quite meet requirements prescribed by the state.

"We cannot entirely make up the loss of 4,000 fully qualified teachers," Bowers declared, "but the cooperation of those temporarily certificated will see Ohio through the war emergency with a minimum deviation from educational standards."

Armed services and more lucrative war time jobs have reduced ranks of qualified teachers in the state by 4,000 or about 10 percent of the normal teacher strength.

Bowers' office is the final one to which local boards may appeal

if they are unable to fill prevailing shortages. Last year when the shortage was serious for the first time, Bowers traveled all over Ohio in an effort to fill prevailing vacancies. Finally, the job was completed.

George D. McDowell, Pickaway county superintendent, has been working diligently with local boards of education in an effort to cut vacancies to a minimum. The local superintendent reports success although several vacancies still exist. However, board meetings scheduled this week are expected to fill remaining posts. Most difficulty has been experienced in commercial departments.

Bowers, former school superintendent at Williamsport, said the state department is issuing temporary one-year certificates to persons whose qualifications do not quite meet requirements prescribed by the state.

"We cannot entirely make up the loss of 4,000 fully qualified teachers," Bowers declared, "but the cooperation of those temporarily certificated will see Ohio through the war emergency with a minimum deviation from educational standards."

Armed services and more lucrative war time jobs have reduced ranks of qualified teachers in the state by 4,000 or about 10 percent of the normal teacher strength.

The MIGHTY Pulse

Here is a picture of rural America . . . at peace . . . where pride is strong . . . religion is deep . . . freedom is bright . . . here, the mighty pulse of the nation beats calmly.

Today, rural America is at war . . . its mighty pulse is beating faster, stronger . . . as soldiers of the soil are growing and harvesting an ever mounting volume of food from this good earth of unparalleled diversity . . . food for our millions of fighting men and our fighting Allies . . . food for our millions of war workers and civilians . . . food for starved, enslaved nations . . . food that is giving the liberty loving people of the world the strength and endurance to smash on against the enemy.

The American railroads are moving approximately 30,000,000 pounds of food a day for our fighting men. They are moving a thousand carloads of food a day for our Allies. And they are moving the great bulk of the products from the farms and processing plants which feed the 126,000,000 of us here at home.

The Norfolk and Western Railway traverses a great cross section of rural America's rich agricultural storehouse. Throughout this fertile and bountiful region, soldiers of the soil are producing as never before. The Norfolk and Western serves them . . . with pride . . . for the fruits of their labor is a mighty weapon . . . food for Victory and Freedom.
